NEWS SUMMARY.

—Gold closed in New York on Saturday at 139c.

—Cotton closed very firm, sales 4000 bales, Middling 25c.

—Cotton in Liverpool closed active and buoyant on Saturday. Sales 10,000 bales, Uplands on the spot and about 10c, Orleans 10c.

—William Henry Augustus Bissell, D. D., Rector of Trinity Church, Geneva, New York, was unanimously elected Bishop of Vermont by the Episcopal Convention in Burlington, on Wednesday.

—Brigham Young, who, as every one knows, has a large and constantly increasing household, has established a cotton factory, to meet the demand for goods. He believes in fostering domestic industry.

—A corps of artists connected with the principal illustrated weeklies are en route to Washington, to photograph the scene in the high court of impeachment. A special artist from the London Illustrated News is said to be among them.

—In Vienna, a woman has just confessed that, during the last ten years, she and her father had committed sixteen murders for money. Under her direction a search has been made, which resulted in the finding of all the skeletons.

—A bill is before the California Legislature providing that persons who shall plant highways with trees and sustain the growth of the same for five years, shall have a reduction of their tax at the rate of one dollar annually for every tree thus planted.

—The building of the Great Exposition in the Champ de Mars, Paris, which cost 11,000,000 francs, has been sold for 1,010,000 francs. It was somewhat in the way of the military displays in which the Champ is devoted, and the military insisted on its removal.

—Colonel M. C. Galloway, editor of the Memphis Avalanche, was arrested on Wednesday night and confined in jail under a warrant issued by Judge Hunter, of the Criminal Court, sentencing him to ten days' imprisonment and a fine of ten dollars, for an article in the Avalanche relative to the arrest of the local editor of that paper by Judge Hunter.

—Governor Baker, of Louisiana, appeared before the United States Commissioner in New Orleans on Tuesday, to answer to a charge of perjury in taking the oath of office, and was released on giving bonds in two thousand dollars to appear at some future day. The affidavit making the charge against him is signed "Henry Dennis—his mark." Dennis is a negro.

—A new method of propelling steamboats is shortly to be exhibited. The propelling power is steam, but is to be used in an entirely different manner from that common at present. The ponderous, expensive, and dangerous marine engines, with their enormous shafts, cranks, and walking-beams, are to be done away with, and the power is to be applied directly to the periphery of the paddle wheel.

—That venerable belle of Baltimore, Madame Bonaparte, widow of Jerome, preserves her face from wrinkles by abstaining from both laughter and tears. She also nightly encases her taper fingers in metallic thimbles, and has done so for the last forty years. "Consequently," says Jenkins, "her hand retains much of its original symmetry, and the decay of her charms is as sweet and as faultless as the falling leaves of the rose."

—In Boston, the bootblacks and newboys are licensed. Each bootblack has his stand, which is located in a place where it will not interfere with the convenience of the public. The issuing of licenses is done in the most systematic manner. No license is issued to any boy who does not attend school during some portion of the day, and those who do not attend the public schools are required to attend the newsboys' school at least two hours each day. A very large portion, nearly all, in fact, of the boys who apply for licenses are members of the public schools of the city. Each boy receives a leather badge to be worn on his hat or cap while pursuing his occupation. This badge contains the word "Licensed," and also the number of his license in polished letters. The bootblacks also have the letter "B" upon their badges. The boys are not required to pay anything for their licenses, but for their badges they pay $1.25, which will be refunded when required, if properly used. A record is kept of all the boys licensed, with their age, the school they attend, and the officer who has charge of their district. The applications for newboys' licenses are very numerous, and it is thought that probably three hundred will be issued before all are supplied.

—The most horrible outrages are reported as having been committed by the bandits in some of the Mexican provinces. The Gaudalajara correspondent of the Brownsville Ranchero writes, on the 16th ultimo: "Chavez and his band, after disappearing from before Matatlan, were not heard from for several days. The night before last, while attending a dance in the San Pedro gardens, several of the beautiful daughters of our wealthiest families were seized by a large number of masked villains and carried away. This morning I saw D. T. was found at the same garden a raving lunatic. Her hair had been shaven, her breasts cut open, and her person violated, and reason dethroned through her sufferings. She was nearly naked. On her was found a letter from Chavez, saying that unless $200,000 in gold was sent to his camp in the mountains west of Guadalupe, all of the other five ladies would be similarly treated. The money was sent, and after Chavez received it—and it had to be carried to him on a mule with a single servant—be and his companion friends left upon the ladies and outraged them. They then tied them on to mules and left them in charge of the servant who brought them the money. For despatchness, for brutality, for all that is awful in crime, modern history furnishes few deeds to match this."

—The system of underground telegraph lines, insulated with an asphaltic compound, noticed so favorably in the Paris Exhibition, has lately been tried with highly satisfactory results by the royal engineers in the yard of the Brompton Barracks, at Chiswick, England. This system, the invention of Mr. Donald Nicol, consists in laying down a series of right-angled, or rods of asphaltic containing the wires, in trenches in the earth, as lengths of iron gas-pipe are laid. These sections are in about twelve feet lengths, the conducting wires protruding at the ends, and being alternately laid straight and twisted into "corkscrews." In planting the lines the straight ends of one section are pushed into the "corkscrews" of the next, and so on. The blow of a hammer upon the "corkscrews" ensures perfect contact, and when the junction is filled in with melted asphaltic perfect insulation is also effected. In this way a dozen joints of this system is that the insulating material is poured in at a temperature considerably above that of boiling water, so that if any moisture settles upon the ends of the sections it is driven off in the form of steam as soon as the melted insulator reaches it. The cost of laying is one hundred dollars a mile.

MONDAY MORNING, MARCH 16, 1868.

The Coming Elections—An Important Order.

In another column will be found an order from General CANBY, establishing regulations for the conduct of the elections for State officers and members of Congress, to be held on April 14, 15 and 16th next.

A revising session of the Board of Registration will be held, commencing fourteen days prior to the election. All persons not entitled to registration will then be stricken from the lists, and there is the highly important provision that the Boards of Registration shall add to the lists of persons entitled to vote the names of all persons who, at that time, are entitled to registration under the Reconstruction acts.

Certificates of registration are to be given to voters who are removing from the district in which they are registered—the elections will be superintended by the Boards of Registration—the polls will be open from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M.—no candidates for election to any office to be filled at the election shall serve as judge of elections or manager in the precinct which he seeks to represent—threats of violence and the carrying of deadly weapons are prohibited—no soldiers are to appear at the polling places unless as qualified voters, but troops will be held in hand and prepared to act promptly if the civil authorities are unable to preserve the peace.

The order specifies the State officers to be voted for, and the composition of the election districts in the State.

Disraeli.

A good deal of curiosity prevails in regard to DISRAELI's policy. After the great revolution in the Tory party the Secretary who led the movement and whose dexterous policy changed defeat into triumph, is now with universal applause accredited with the honors he has fairly won. The aim pursued by a Parliamentary career of more than thirty years, is won. The wondrous Alroy realizes the vivid dreams of his youth and sways a mightier sceptre than that of the Prince of the Captivity. What will not genius fired by ambition effect? The most dreamy and sentimental of novelists has become the most practical of statesmen.

The dulcet of speakers—the man who made the terrible failure of 1837, but who, as he sat down amid the derisive cheers of the House, exclaimed: "The time is coming when you will hear me!" is now heard with pleased attention. Amid a haughty exclusive aristocracy, amid a people who hold together "close as Scotch herrings," this member of an oriental race, distinct and peculiar, and preserving a certain foreign air after so many centuries of exile in the lands of the West, stands to-day the ruler of England.

The recent changes in the constitution of that country have been so radical that the administration of public affairs demands the greatest fertility of resource and the most practiced skill in direction and control. In these respects no British statesman has the reputation of DISRAELI. Personally he is very popular. He is greeted with cheers from both sides of the House when he appeared before them as Premier. He is an anomaly—a Tory with Radical tendencies—and so is fitted for these very anomalous times. Between the two extreme parties in England he has succeeded in crushing the Whigs. He is admired by the Tories, as the politician who saved them when their overthrow was confidently predicted. He is beloved by the lower classes as the politician who has widely extended the privilege of suffrage—and that in such a way as to gratify the pride of Englishmen.

The fundamental maxim of the domestic policy, to which the new Premier stands committed is "the recognition of national traits as the best security for national institutions." The maxim may be commended to Congress. Mr. DISRAELI believes that progress is an evolution, not a demolition. He believes that while every country must be affected by the spirit of the age, that spirit must conform itself to the national genius, as well as to public opinion. He has accordingly succeeded in arranging the electoral franchise to the satisfaction of the people of Great Britain by adjusting it to the parish system, one of the oldest institutions of the kingdom. Those who had a vote in the local government, now have a vote in the general government. Those who were the electors for the parish, were made electors for Parliament. The plan was simple, wise and easy of accomplishment; it was adopted. Its success, at once confirmed and consummated the reputation of its projector.

The policy of DISRAELI toward Ireland will be conservative and kindly. He is pledged to treat that distracted dependency "with tender regard." It will be an awkward business to redress the evils of Irishmen complain, and that in such a way as will be agreeable to the temper of the English people. In this instance the labor of the statesman is not to develop, but to undo. He must carry on a peaceful revolution. In dealing with Ireland he must consult the national traits and old institutions of that country—not of England. Will the English submit to the reversal of a policy which extends back to the days of CROMWELL and even of ELIZABETH? A few years ago the question could have been answered with a decided negative. But perhaps the Fenian excitement may lead the English Parliament and people to accept the conciliatory measures of DISRAELI.

In regard to the foreign policy of the new administration the general statement is made that the course adopted by Lord DERBY will still be pursued. Besides an assurance is given to all foreign governments of "a generous sympathy with their institutions." This official declaration, as well as the temper of the Parliamentary houses, makes it pretty certain that England will not go to war, in regard to the Alabama complication, unless some rash act of the American Congress shall necessitate the conflict. A conservative legislation, and a dignified, courteous and politic Premier guarantee peace, if peace can be maintained consistently with honor.
